

Dear Students,

I hope you have enjoyed the winter break and now look forward to the new semester ahead.

Please remember that all JD residential, LL.M. and S.J.D. classes will begin, as planned, on January 10, but will be held fully online through January 23. During this time, in-person classes will not be held in Dineen Hall and the building will remain closed.

Please feel free to be in touch with your professors if you need any clarification concerning access to your virtual classrooms or access to a course's Blackboard page. Please also remember that on-line attendance requires you to be on-camera during the entire class.

I refer you to my message below, for more information on Library Services over the next few weeks and for important information concerning our return to campus in the coming weeks.

In the meantime, be well, and remember to visit our Law Preparedness pages for the latest information on University and College of Law operations during the pandemic and for answers to frequently asked questions.

I look forward to seeing you soon!

With optimism,

Craig M. Boise

Dean and Professor of Law
