Dear College of Law Community,

As the US continues to report COVID-19 cases around the country, it is inevitable that some of us at SU—students, faculty and staff—will be among those who contract the virus.

This morning, I write to report that one of our students has reported that he is sick with COVID-19. This student is doing well and under care. Because COVID-19 is now prevalent in many communities across the US, all of us should assume appropriate precautions whether on campus, in transit, or in our communities. Please continue to protect yourselves by following the official guidance of our respective federal, state, and local authorities.

This is a rapidly evolving situation. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) remains the best source of information. Please continue to follow its guidance, including advisories on what to do if you feel sick. If you develop a fever and symptoms, such as a cough or difficulty breathing, call your healthcare provider for medical advice.

If you test positive for COVID-19, please feel free to let me know. You are not obligated to do so, however. Students should contact your professors regarding accommodations if you are sick and unable to participate in class. Staff should notify their supervisors.

Be well. I will stay in touch as more guidance becomes available.

Best regards,

Craig M. Boise
