

May 22, 2020

Dear Students:

A number of states require self-isolation or self-quarantine for persons entering from New York. These restrictions could impact your plans to sit for the bar exam in a state outside New York, if you are not presently in that state.

If you plan to take the bar exam in a state outside New York, please make sure to check that's state public health requirements for self-isolation or self-quarantine and be sure to situate yourself within enough time to meet those requirements.

In the meantime, here is a link to an article in USA Today, which identifies states currently imposing such requirements. The list could change! Be sure to consult your state's guidance from time to time.

As always, please reach out if there is anything I can do to help you plan for success on the bar!

Yours,

Courtney A. Abbott Hill

Associate Director of Student Affairs, Academic and Bar Support

Syracuse University College of Law